

Thursday, May 11, 2017

CREATING AMERICAN COMMUNITY

The All Stars Project (ASP) held its national gala, Creating American Community, at the David H. Koch Theater at Lincoln Center. Over 400 guests were in attendance and the event raised a total of $2,017,393 in private funding for its Afterschool Development programs.

Peter Langerman, Chairman, President and CEO of Franklin Mutual Advisers and Hank Neely, Partner, Southwest Region at EY were honored for their vision and commitment to opening up genuine pathways of opportunities for inner-city youth. New York City Police Department (NYPD) Commissioner James P. O'Neill was a featured guest speaker and made remarks about the importance of Operation Conversation: Cops & Kids, an award-winning partnership program of the ASP and the NYPD, that helps to improve the relationship between police and inner-city youth.

All Stars also recognized New Leaders for Afterschool Development, a cross section of philanthropists and business leaders who have stepped up and made a real impact on youth in poor communities nationwide. Bob Pisani of CNBC acted as emcee for the evening and All Stars youth performed and hosted the event.

NYPD Commissioner James P. O'Neill and Dr. Lenora Fulani

Front, left to right: Lauren Horn, Yaa Obeng, Michael F. Price, Christopher Hardy, and Chance Forbes; Back, left to right: Jon Sheftel, Cali Forbes, Andrew Price, Kerri Price, and Mohammed Amer

Kate Barton, Hank Neely, Gabrielle Kurlander, Christopher Street, Leslie Odonkor

Gabrielle Kurlander with All Stars Talent Show Network youth performers, The Tigerettes

Gabrielle Kurlander, Peter Langerman, Dana Langerman, Dr. Lenora Fulani and Zyair Crump

John Thurlow, Mike Pickering, Jeremy Shure, Gerard McGraw, Sekou Kaalund, Cynthia Coverson, Adam Ames, Jenny Zak, and Antoine Joyce at the All Stars Project's national gala, Creating American Community.